No matter which program you choose, you can be sure of Baylor's commitment to academic excellence and student success.

Our Global Gateway Program (GGP) provides a combination of academic and English learning courses to those who are academically qualified but need to enhance their English proficiency.

Students who meet the entry requirements may apply for direct admission.

Our campus is open, and we hope that we are able to welcome all students in person as soon as possible. If unanticipated issues, such as visa delays or travel restrictions, prevent you from arriving in time, online options will be available. NEW FALL 2021 GRADUATE PROGRAM

Most graduate programs at Baylor are direct admission only, but we now offer a Master's International Year (MIY) in Engineering through our Global Gateway Program.

The Master of Engineering* (MEng) is an interdisciplinary degree, jointly administered by the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering and the Department of Mechanical Engineering.

This flexible program allows students to tailor their courses to their interests. Alongside engineering courses, students will be able to study complementary subjects such as business, mathematics, statistics and more, with the guidance of their advisor.

The MIY program allows students to gain their degree in 4 semesters — the same amount of time as a Direct Admit student — but with the added support of International Study Center staff and English language study.

We are committed to working with every student on the options to continue studying with us. For students who decide to withdraw after beginning their online courses, GGP and direct admission students may receive a 100% refund on their tuition and deposit within 14 days of starting their course online, should they decide not to continue with virtual learning for the quarter.

If a student completes the course online and is then not able to come to the US because of visa issues, that student will be entitled to a 50% refund of tuition paid after completing the online program if they have achieved the required minimum GPA requirement, have met academic progress criteria, and have shown evidence of two (2) visa denials by the designated date for that semester. This refund policy is applicable to GGP and direct admission students.
